LEGEND

M =

Employer Identification Number:

Dear Sir or Madam:

This is in reply to your letter of June 20, 2000, concerning the reversion of your assets to your sponsoring employer.

You were established by M to provide post-retirement benefits to the employees of several for-profit, managed care companies M had established. You have been recognized as exempt under section 501(c)(9) of the Internal Revenue Code.

M, your sponsoring employer, has been recognized as exempt under section 501(c)(3) of the Code and is other than a private foundation within the meaning of section 509(a) because it is a hospital within the meaning of section 509(a)(1) and 170(b)(1)(A)(iii).

Because of changes in the government policy in determining capitation rates, the for-profit subsidiaries of M have ceased operations. These subsidiaries never generated a profit or taxable income and never contributed any monies to your benefit plan. Employees of the for-profit subsidiaries were not eligible to participate in the benefit plan you offered the other employees of M. You currently have only a few remaining covered participants. M proposes to establish a new plan for the benefit of the remaining participants and is to fund it with the amount which has been determined by an actuary to be adequate to meet all future claims. M will then amend your trust documents to permit the reversion of your remaining assets to M as the sponsoring employer and you will then be terminated.

You have requested rulings that the return of surplus assets to your sponsor will not retroactively revoke your tax-exempt status nor trigger the imposition of the section 4976 excise tax on M. Further, you have requested that we rule that the reversion of assets will not be taxed as unrelated business income to either M or yourself.

Section 501(c)(9) of the Code provides for the exemption from federal income tax of voluntary employees' beneficiary associations providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such association or their dependents or designated beneficiaries if no part of the net earnings of such association inures (other than through such payments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

Re:

Section 1.501(c)(9)-1 of the Income Tax Regulations provides that for an organization to be described in section 501(c)(9), it must be an employees' association; membership in the association must be voluntary; the organization must provide for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to its members; and there can be no inurement (other than by payment of permitted benefits) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

Section 1.501(c)(9)-4(a) of the regulations provides that no part of the net earnings of an employees' association may inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual other than through the payment of permissible benefits. Whether prohibited inurement has occurred is a question to be determined with regard to all the facts and circumstances.

Section 1.501(c)(9)-4(d) of the regulations provides that it will not constitute prohibited inurement if, on termination of a plan established by an employer and funded through an association described in section 501(c)(9), any assets remaining in the association, after the satisfaction of all liabilities to existing beneficiaries of the plan, are applied to provide, either directly or through the purchase of insurance, life, sick, accident or other benefits within the meaning of section 1.501(c)(9)-3 pursuant to criteria that do not provide for disproportionate benefits to officers, shareholders, or highly compensated employees of the employer. Similarly, a distribution to members upon the dissolution of the association will not constitute prohibited inurement if the amount distributed to members are determined pursuant to the terms of a collective bargaining agreement or on the basis of objective and reasonable standards which do not result in either unequal payment to similarly situated members or in disproportionate payments to officers, shareholders, or highly compensated employees of any employer contributing to or other funding the employees' association. Except as otherwise provided in the first sentence of this paragraph, if the association's corporate charter, articles of association, trust instrument or other written instrument by which the association was created, as amended from time to time, provides that on dissolution its assets will be distributed to its member's contributing employers, or if in the absence of such provision the law of the state in which the association was created provides for such distribution to the contributing employers, the association is not described in section 501(c)(9).

Section 511(a) of the Code imposes a tax on the "unrelated business taxable income" of organizations described in section 501(c).

Section 512(a)(1) of the Code defines the term unrelated business taxable income as gross income derived by any organization from any unrelated trade or business (as defined in section 513) regularly carried on by it less allowable deductions directly connected with the carrying on of such trade or business both computed with the modifications provided in section 512(b).

Section 513(a) of the Code provides that the term "unrelated trade or business" means any trade or business the conduct of which is not substantially related (aside from the need of such organization for income or funds or the use it makes of the profits derived) to the exercise or performance by such organization of its charitable, educational, or other purpose or function constituting the basis for its exemption under section 501.

Section 4976(a) of the Code imposes an excise tax on an employer equal to 100 percent of any disqualified benefit provided by an employer-maintained welfare benefit fund.

Section 4976(b)(1)(C) of the Code defines "disqualified benefit" to include any portion of a welfare benefit fund reverting to the benefit of the employer.

Re:

The information submitted establishes there have been changes in government funding for M's health care programs and these have adversely affected its operations. Therefore, M will establish a new trust to continue to provide benefits to your few remaining participants and you will terminate your operations. The remaining funds held by you will revert to M to be used to carry on its own charitable programs.

Because upon your dissolution, some of your assets will be distributed to M, you will be disqualified under section 501(c)(9). See section 1.501(c)(9)-4(d) of the regulations. Although the amendment of your trust documents and transfer of assets will affect your tax-exempt status, they will not affect, in any manner, your tax-exempt status prior to the adoption of the proposed Amendment and subsequent transfer of assets.

As a general rule the return of any portion of the funds held in a welfare benefit fund for the benefit of an employer is a disqualified benefit and subjects the plan sponsor to the section 4976(a)(2) excise tax. However, the section 4976 excise tax was enacted to establish a meaningful sanction that would prohibit an employer from accumulating funds in a qualifying trust on a tax free basis and subsequently modifying the plan so it would cease to qualify for exemption. It was felt the previously existing sanctions, loss of exemption or deductions from future contributions were insufficient deterrents. But no tax deduction is possible for an exempt organization for a contribution to a VEBA (other than in connection with an unrelated trade or business). and earnings on amounts held by the tax-exempt employer are not taxed whether or not transferred to a VEBA. In the case of a tax-exempt employer, therefore, we conclude that amounts contributed to a fund, unless directly connected with an unrelated trade or business are "not allowable as a deduction under section 419" within the meaning of section 4976(b)(3). Accordingly, section 4976(b)(1)(C) does not apply to any assets that may revert to M.

Accordingly, based on the information submitted and the representations you have made we rule that your return of surplus assets to your sponsor will not retroactively revoke your tax-exempt status under section 501(c)(9) of the Code nor trigger the imposition of the section 4976 excise tax on M. Further, the reversion of assets will not be taxed as unrelated business income to either M or yourself.

This ruling is directed only to the organization that requested it. Section 611 O(k)(3) of the Code provides that it may not be used or cited as precedent.

We are informing the Ohio TE/GE Customer Service Office of this ruling. Because this letter could help resolve any questions about your exempt status, a copy of it should be kept in your permanent records.

If you have any questions about this ruling, please contact the person whose name and telephone number are shown in the heading of this letter.

Sincerely,

Terrell M. Berkovsky
